prioritizes emotional security and consistency. This method is especially popular among parents seeking a balanced strategy between attachment parenting and independent sleep training.

Key Principles

The core principles of the Sleep Lady Method include patience, gradual transitions, and parental presence. This approach helps children adapt to sleeping independently without feeling abandoned or anxious. The method involves a step-by-step process that gradually reduces parental intervention at bedtime, encouraging self-soothing skills.

How It Works

Typically, the Sleep Lady Method involves a “camping out” technique where parents stay with the child initially and slowly increase physical distance over several nights. This allows the child to feel safe while learning to fall asleep independently. The method can be tailored to fit various ages and sleep challenges, making it flexible and widely applicable.
