Lou Gehrig's speech delivered on July 4, 1939, is one of the most poignant moments in sports history and American culture. This farewell address, made by the legendary baseball player as he retired due to his diagnosis of amyotrophic lateral sclerosis (ALS), resonates with audiences for its emotional depth, clarity, and rhetorical power. In this article, we will analyze the rhetorical strategies Gehrig employed, exploring how they contributed to the lasting impact of his speech.

Context and Background

Lou Gehrig, known as the "Iron Horse," was a celebrated player for the New York Yankees. His career was marked by extraordinary achievements, including an impressive streak of 2,130 consecutive games played. However, in 1939, Gehrig's health began to decline due to ALS, a progressive neurodegenerative disease that would eventually end his life. On Independence Day that year, Gehrig delivered his farewell address at Yankee Stadium, a moment that would become iconic in both sports and American history.

Rhetorical Strategies in Gehrig's Speech

Gehrig's farewell speech is a masterclass in rhetoric, utilizing various strategies to convey his message effectively. Key elements include ethos, pathos, logos, and a variety of rhetorical devices.

Establishing Ethos

Ethos, or credibility, is crucial for any speaker, and Gehrig establishes his ethos through his reputation as a humble and hardworking athlete. He does not seek pity but rather expresses gratitude for the opportunities he has had. For example, he opens his speech with the famous line:

"I consider myself the luckiest man on the face of the earth."

This statement immediately creates a sense of humility and admiration, allowing the audience to trust his words. Gehrig's acknowledgment of his achievements and the support he received throughout his career reinforces his credibility and character.

Appealing to Pathos

Pathos, the emotional appeal, is one of the most significant elements of Gehrig's speech. He evokes feelings of sympathy and admiration through his poignant language and personal anecdotes. By focusing on his love for the game and his teammates, he creates an emotional connection with the audience.

Key moments that highlight pathos include:

- Personal Reflections: Gehrig recounts his journey in baseball, expressing gratitude to his teammates, coaches, and fans. His mention of the people who supported him fosters a deep emotional resonance.
- Acknowledgment of Loss: He briefly touches on the reality of his illness, stating, "The disease is not a bad break." This acceptance of his condition shows strength and grace, eliciting further empathy from the audience.

Utilizing Logos

Logos, or logical appeal, is also present in Gehrig's speech, though it is less overt than ethos and pathos. He logically outlines the impact of his career, stating the statistics and accomplishments that defined him as a player. By doing this, Gehrig provides a factual basis for his feelings of gratitude and luck, reinforcing the authenticity of his emotions.

Rhetorical Devices

Gehrig employs a variety of rhetorical devices to enhance his message and engage his audience. These devices include:

Repetition

Repetition is a powerful tool in rhetoric, and Gehrig uses it effectively to emphasize his main points. The phrase "I have been" appears multiple times throughout the speech, underscoring his gratitude and the experiences that have shaped him. This repetition creates a rhythmic quality that makes his message memorable.

Alliteration

Gehrig also employs alliteration to create a lyrical quality in his speech. Phrases like "luckiest man" and "goodbye to baseball" enhance the emotional weight of his words and make them more impactful.

Imagery

Imagery plays a significant role in Gehrig's speech, allowing the audience to visualize his emotions and experiences. When he describes the joy of playing baseball, he evokes vivid images that resonate with fans and players alike. This imagery deepens the emotional impact and helps listeners connect with his message on a personal level.
