workflow.

Levels of Management Explained

Management is structured into different levels, each with distinct roles and responsibilities. Understanding these levels is crucial for identifying how authority and decision-making flow within an organization. The three primary levels of management are top-level, middle-level, and lower-level management.

Top-Level Management

Top-level managers, such as CEOs, presidents, and board members, are responsible for the overall direction and policy-making of the organization. They focus on long-term strategic planning and major corporate decisions. Their duties include setting organizational goals, establishing corporate culture, and maintaining stakeholder relationships.

Middle-Level Management

Middle managers act as a bridge between top-level management and lower-level supervisors. They implement strategies developed by top management and oversee departmental functions. Their responsibilities include coordinating activities, managing resources, and ensuring that teams meet their targets.

Lower-Level Management
