Introduction to "Never Smile at a Crocodile"

Never smile at a crocodile is a whimsical song that has captured the hearts of children and adults alike. Originally featured in the 1953 Disney animated film "Peter Pan," this catchy tune serves as both a playful warning and a delightful piece of music that has become a staple in children's entertainment. In this article, we will explore the origins of the song, its themes, its impact on popular culture, and how it continues to resonate with audiences today.

Origins of the Song

The song "Never Smile at a Crocodile" was written by Frank Churchill, with lyrics by Larry Morey. It was composed for the animated adaptation of J.M. Barrie's classic play "Peter Pan," which tells the story of a boy who can fly and never grows up. The song is performed by the character of the crocodile, who is portrayed as a humorous yet somewhat menacing figure lurking in the waters of Neverland.

Frank Churchill and Larry Morey

Frank Churchill was an American composer and songwriter known for his work on various Disney films. Alongside Larry Morey, who was a lyricist, the duo created several memorable songs that have stood the test of time. Their collaboration on "Never Smile at a Crocodile" showcases their ability to blend humor and caution, delivering a message that is both entertaining and educational.

Incorporation into Peter Pan

In the context of "Peter Pan," the song serves as a reminder to the characters—and the audience—about the potential dangers of the crocodile, who has a penchant for sneaking up on others. The lighthearted yet cautionary tone of the song makes it not only engaging for children but also serves as a narrative device that adds depth to the story.
