One night in the emergency room, a nurse noticed a young boy who was scared and alone after a minor injury. By the end of the treatment, the boy was smiling and even joking about how he would be a superhero after this incident. It was a small act of kindness that turned a frightening experience into one of reassurance and laughter.

2. A Touch of Compassion

A nurse once recounted a day when she was caring for an elderly patient who had lost his wife recently. He was visibly depressed and withdrawn. Instead of just checking his vitals, she decided to spend some extra time with him. She brought in her tablet and showed him pictures from her wedding. The nurse realized that sometimes, the best medicine is simply being there for someone.
