

rock n roll high school

Rock n Roll High School is an iconic film that has transcended generations, capturing the essence of youth rebellion, the power of music, and the spirit of the 1970s punk rock movement. Released in 1979, this cult classic directed by Allan Arkush and produced by Roger Corman, combines humor, music, and a dose of teenage angst to deliver a story that resonates with anyone who has ever felt like an outsider. Through its vibrant characters and memorable soundtrack, "Rock n Roll High School" not only entertains but also serves as a commentary on the cultural landscape of its time.

Synopsis of the Film

"Rock n Roll High School" follows the story of Riff Randell, played by P.J. Soles, a passionate high school student with a deep love for rock music, particularly the Ramones. Riff dreams of performing with her favorite band and has aspirations for a life filled with music and excitement. However, her dreams are threatened by the oppressive school principal, Miss Togar, portrayed by Mary Woronov, who is determined to eliminate rock music from the school environment.

As Riff navigates the challenges of high school, she and her friends, including the lovable misfit group known as the "Riff's friends," concoct various plans to bring rock music to their school. The film culminates in a climactic concert featuring the Ramones, during which Riff and her friends seize the moment to showcase their love for music and rebellion against authority.
